Personal Reflection:

It was interesting to read about ICA branches as on occasion I have seen these and as we use branches as a method of identifying the ECA it is important to remember that these do exist.

Reading about carotid artery stenting in the early phase of an ischaemic stroke was interesting as we tend to only scan patients whose strokes are resolving so if surgeons operate earlier on these patients then we would need to change our protocols to scan all of those fit for surgery irrespective of their recovery stage.
